MUM MADE ME

Seven years for mum who 'forced' son to commit robbery

by TOM BARNES

tbarnes@london.newsquest.co.uk

A trusted employee who manipulated her son into helping her mastermind an armed robbery at PC World Kingston has been jailed for seven years.

Assistant manager Mina Bradley pressured her son, Anthony Bradley, also an employee, into finding gunmen to rob the Fife Road store on January 16 in an error-strewn raid.

Kingston Crown Court heard how Anthony Bradley, 22, handed three years for his role, succumbed to "mummy pressure", recruiting Michael Ward, 20, sentenced to five years, and another unidentified accomplice.

When they were arrested, Ward and Anthony Bradley admitted their guilt but the mother-of-three continued to deny involvement in the raid, until she realised her son planned to testify against her.

Recorder James Roberts said it was "regrettable in the extreme" that Bradley had involved her son, describing her as the "chief instigator and planner".

Handing the prison term to Mina Bradley, of Marion Court, Robin Hood Way, Sutton, on Friday, October 19, Mr Roberts said: "You used your trusted position at this shop to steal a large sum of money, putting staff members, to whom you owed a duty of care, through a dreadful experience.

"They are the real victims of this crime, who, not knowing this was an inside job, believed their lives were at risk."

The court heard how Mina Bradley handed over security information to the robbers including when the store was holding the most cash, as well using her influence to change staff rotas on the day of the raid.

The duo threatened staff with an imitation Uzi sub-machine gun, making off with nearly £38,000 in cash, then fled the scene separately having argued over whether to steal laptops.

Ward, described as "not a deep thinker" was spotted dumping robbery gear with traces of his DNA in a skip.

He was caught four days later trying to leave Holyhead ferry port in Wales to get to his native Ireland.

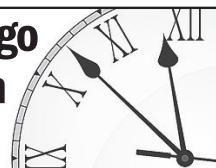

The other man involved is believed to have most of the money.

Anyone with information should call Crimestoppers anonymously on 0800 555 111.

Supermarket manager punched

by TOM BARNES

tbarnes@london.newsquest.co.uk

A supermarket manager was taken to hospital after being attacked by an apparently well-meaning passerby as he challenged shoplifters trying to flee his store.

Jonathan Launchbury, who runs Iceland in Tolworth Broadway, is still recovering after being punched trying to prevent two women stealing frozen food on Monday, October 15.

According to witnesses, the unknown man intervened believing he was protecting the two women from attack, flooring Mr Launchbury.

The brave store manager, thought to be in his 50s, managed to stop the pair stealing, but could not prevent them from getting away.

Worker Mathew DeGannes, 23, confirmed his boss was yet to return to work.

He said: "It was a confusing situation because Jonathan was holding on to the bags trying to stop the two women stealing."

"The man thought the women were in danger and punched him to try to protect them."

A shop worker who asked not to be named said the manager took a nasty blow to the head, and was not expected back at work for a while.

A Crown Prosecution Service spokesman said the passerby may still face assault charges despite his well-intentioned intervention.

She said: "Our first job is to establish whether a crime has been committed and then we would follow the public interest test and the context of the attack before deciding whether to proceed."

A spokeswoman for London Ambulance Service confirmed the manager was taken to hospital with head injuries, though could not say if he had been released.

A spokeswoman from Iceland head office said: "As far as we know this was a very serious incident with our shopkeeper being taken away in an ambulance and another man being taken away by police."

"This is now a police matter and we continue to help them with their inquiries."

Two people are still being sought for the theft.

One man has been arrested for an alleged assault, which occurred in the car park, following the theft. He was bailed pending further inquiries.

It is believed a number of shoppers were in the car park when the assault took place.

They are asked to call Detective Constable Dave Norman on 020 8721 5842.

Gruffalo at story time

Proof that there IS such a thing as a Gruffalo was provided when the fearsome monster turned up for a children's storytelling session in Kingston.

The furry character stood by as children and their parents sat in the children's wear department of John Lewis Kingston to hear his tale, read by Kelly Smith.

The creature is one of the most popular children's characters after starring in a series of books by Julia Donaldson and Axel Scheffler.

He has even starred on stage at the Rose Theatre and will be back for The Gruffalo's Child between March 14 and 17.

Driver in hospital after car smash

A motorist was rushed to hospital after her car smashed into the central reservation near the Tolworth roundabout.

The unknown woman needed to be pulled from the car wreckage by firefighters, following the incident, which took place at about 5.30pm on Monday, October 15.

According to police her injuries were not thought to be life threatening, but it has not been confirmed if she has since left hospital.

The incident took place near to bowling alley Charrington Bowl, on the Kingston Road approach to the roundabout.

A shopkeeper on Tolworth Broadway said: "I didn't see the incident because it was on the other side of the roundabout,

Incident: The Tolworth roundabout

but the traffic was backed up for ages.

"The air ambulance team was there and nobody could get out of Tolworth in any direction it was a nightmare."

"I hope the woman is all right."

There were no other cars involved, police confirmed.

A spokesman for the Metropolitan Police said:

"We were called to reports of a car that had gone into the central reservation on Tolworth roundabout."

"An air ambulance team attended the scene and she was taken to hospital after firefighters attended the scene."

"She was breathing and conscious at the scene and her injuries are not thought to be life-threatening or life-changing."

Sorely missed: Alex the cat

Vet warns of 'sicko' after decapitated cat is found

by TOM BARNES

tbarnes@london.newsquest.co.uk

A devastated Surbiton woman has spoken of her disgust after her kitten had its head and tail cut off.

Leila Frame was on a family holiday in Egypt when an unknown neighbour made the gruesome discovery, taking the pet to a vet's surgery.

To add to the distress, the cat, just short of its first birthday, had been a final present from her dying mother to her seven-year-old daughter Lilly.

Miss Frame said the injuries suggested body parts were cut off by someone using a knife rather than during a fight with another animal.

She said it was hard to believe someone so disturbed could be living in the area and warned other cat owners to be on the lookout.

She said: "It has been a very difficult time. My mother had given me some money before she died to get something nice for my daughter, which makes it all harder to cope with."

"There were no other marks on the body except for a clean slice along the tail and neck. It is hard to believe there are people in the world capable of doing such a terrible thing, let alone in your back yard.

"It is spooky to think someone so disturbed might be living so close."

Nurses at Aspen Veterinary Surgery reported the shocking incident to police after the animal was brought into the Ewell Road surgery on October 4.

Head vet Peter Melville agreed it was most likely Alex had died from wounds inflicted by a human.

He said: "I was not at the surgery, but the nurses said the cut was far too clean along the neck and tail to have been done by another animal."

"Whether the cat was dead and someone sick decided to do this or whether or not it was alive at the time we just do not know. The only thing I can say is I hope this is a one-off, but if anyone has seen any more cases like this to report it to the police."

Police wildlife specialist officers are investigating.

Chance to step into spotlight

The Kingston Guardian is getting behind a new competition to find the stars of our borough this winter.

The search to find Kingston's best performers is set to begin in the lead up to Christmas.

Talented groups and individuals are being asked to come forward to have their chance to "busk" in Kingston town centre.

A variety of acts from Bollywood dance troupes, choirs and musicians will all be showcased in Kingston Spotlight.

From Saturday, November 17, thousands of shoppers will watch the first artists perform with new acts following suit every week until Sunday, December 16.

Performers will have the chance to wow the crowds on Thursdays evenings, Saturdays and Sundays during the month-long initiative organised by Kingstonfirst.

Each week the Kingston Guardian will announce the acts that are due to perform and Kingstonfirst will release short biographies and videos about each act on the Wednesday ahead of the street shows.

The public will then be able to get in touch with the Kingston Guardian to vote for their favourite acts or even send in free text messages to Kingstonfirst for each act to have the chance to be crowned Brightest Spotlight of the Week.

Previous winner of Surrey's Got Talent, Sophie Plummer, 15, is just one of the talented singers taking part in Kingston Spotlight.

Her mother Louise Plummer said: "Born and bred in Kingston, Sophie is really looking forward to being a part of Kingston Spotlight as it will be fantastic to perform in her home town."

Organiser Ros Morgan, chief executive at Kingstonfirst, said: "Not only is this a fabulous opportunity to showcase the incredible talent we have in the borough but it also adds that little bit extra to what is already an exciting Christmas festival programme."

To get involved follow @KSpotlight on Twitter, email Eleanor Appleton at eleanor@kingstonspotlight.co.uk or news desk@kingstonguardian.co.uk.

Investing in young black men's future

A Kingston social enterprise that helps young black men fulfil their potential has won thousands of pounds.

Despite competition from a host of other charities, the Reach Society landed the £5,000 prize from the Lloyds Banking Group Community Fund after a public vote.

Dr Dwain Neil, one of three programme directors at the group, which is based at 2 High Street, Kingston, said: "We have just completed our second year and the support and recognition we have got is invaluable and something really worthwhile."

The group aims to encourage and motivate young black men at risk of falling between society's cracks.

Dr Neil said: "We don't want members of the black community to regard their future as being on the way to prison."

Lloyds Banking Group, the largest financial services investor in UK communities, has provided funding to 132 organisations around the UK through its Community Fund in 2012.

Fight the fungus

Almost half of the cover of the Isabella Plantation in Richmond Park will be removed over the next five years.

About 40 per cent of the Isabella Plantation is covered with rhododendron ponticum, a non-native and invasive variety of rhododendron introduced by the Victorians.

This cover has expanded over the years, blocking light out and trapping air, creating a warm and humid environment in which pests and diseases can breed.

A significant fear is that the Isabella Plantation will become infected by a fungal pathogen known as sudden oak death.

If it does it could quickly spread through its valuable plant collection.

Removal has already begun, and is being carried out partly by machine and partly with the help of volunteers from Friends of Richmond Park and the local community.

These include young people from local schools and youth groups, as part of the Challenge Network, who have been helping with the clearing process.

Hannah Pritchard, partnership and community engagement officer for the Royal Parks, said: "It is great to have so many young people here helping and learning about how the parks are maintained."

Push: Volunteers clearing the ground

The areas that are cleared will be replanted with mixed planting, mainly deciduous trees and shrubs. This will break up the cover, safeguarding against the spread of pests and disease, as well as providing food and shelter for birds and insects.

fracture risk assessments

Osteoporosis is common in postmenopausal women and can result in pain, deformity and loss of independence. Hip fractures can prove fatal. Osteoporosis can be prevented if weak bones are detected early enough but scans for assessing risk of future osteoporotic fracture are not always readily available on the NHS. However, you can now have a non-invasive scan for £26.

Boundary shake-up will reduce MP numbers ‘A chance to have fun’

Kingston and Surbiton’s MP will gain north Kingston, but lose New Malden and Old Malden at the next general election under new proposals.

The news comes after the Boundary Commission’s final proposals for new constituencies were released.

Although the Liberal Democrats indicated they may block the changes, they would be part of the biggest shake-up in a quarter of a century reducing the number of MPs in Parliament.

They would move Canbury and Tudor wards from the Richmond Park ward back into Kingston.

If re-elected Kingston and Surbiton MP Edward Davey would lose St James and Old Malden to a new combined ward of Sutton and Cheam, currently held by Liberal Democrat MP Paul Burstow.

Beverley ward would also be shifted into a New Malden and Wimbledon seat, along with Coombe Hill and Coombe Vale, which are held by Richmond Park MP Zac Goldsmith.

The current holder of the Wimbledon seat is Tory Stephen Hammond.

Mr Goldsmith said: “Boundary changes are rarely welcomed by constituency MPs because they involve losing connections with local people and causes. I am naturally disappointed the proposals involve the removal of north Kingston. That said, my role is to represent the existing constituency, and until the next election, that is what I will do.”

Mr Goldsmith could go head to head with Twickenham MP Vince Cable at the next general election and fight for a new constituency under the proposals, which MPs are due to vote on in 2013.

Young people have been rewarded with a new youth club in New Malden.

The social club was set up exclusively for members of Kingston Youth Council, Kingston Cared for and Fostered Council and YU online magazine.

The invitation-only club runs at the Fountain Youth Centre, in Kingston Road, and aims to give young people a break from their hard work on the councils.

The club takes place every month and the second session was held on October 16, when Councillor Patricia Bamford joined young people.

Youth participation worker Francis Taylor said: “The nature of those three projects is pretty much work, so we wanted to give them the chance to have fun. It is great to see them in a different light, enjoying themselves.”

The youth centre has a football table, table tennis, a Playstation, pool table, outdoor space and a kitchen.

Praise for brave pensioner who stood up to gunmen

by TOM BARNES
tbarnes@london.newsquest.co.uk

A woman has paid tribute to a plucky pensioner who helped to fend off armed gunmen trying to rob a post office.

Manager Birgit Clark said the elderly woman intervened when two masked men tried to rob the store in Alexandra Drive, Berrylands, on September 14.

She said the woman, who is a regular customer, shouted at the robbers demanding they leave, eventually helping to scare them off.

Mrs Clark said she did not get a look at the two men because she was pistol-whipped on the head from behind, but said with the help of her “bodyguard” she recovered in time to stop the pair making off with any cash.

Mrs Clark, originally from Germany, was taken to hospital with minor injuries but said she was back to work the following morning.

She said: “When the two guys came she just was not having it. I don’t think she realised how brave she had been. There are not a lot of people who would have had the courage to do that. She was absolutely brilliant, fantastic. I am so grateful.

“I just hope they catch them now.”

She said that she had been “overwhelmed” by the kindness and support shown by the people in Berrylands since the attack.

She has also received a visit from Kingston and Surbiton MP Edward Davey who offered his support.

She said: “It is simply marvellous to know that people really care about one another round here.

“I have had chocolate, letters, flowers, cards from young children hoping I get better.

“I just want to say how much I appreciate all that everyone has done for me since those two guys came in here.

“It just goes to show what a wonderful community there is in Berrylands.”

After the robbery, the postmaster, who this week is supporting Children in Need with a Pudsey Bear competition, was described as a popular member of the Berrylands community with shock over what had happened to her.

Flying squad detectives are asking anyone with information about the robbery to call the incident room at Barnes on 020 8247 3940 or Crime stoppers on 0800 555 111 if you wish to remain anonymous.

Swede little mystery: Who will run new free primary?

A Swedish company is interested in running a new primary free school in Kingston.

International English Schools UK Limited (IES) is one of two Swedish organisations interested in opening schools in Kingston to solve the places crisis.

The company would offer an adapted version of the Swedish free school model and under parent company International English Schools UK.

The international market for schools in Kingston emerged at a meeting for parents.

They were told more free schools would be needed to meet the demand for places at a meeting with the council's new director of learning and

by CLARE BUCHANAN

children's service Nick Whitfield.

The Swedes include tough love and internationalism as part of their ethos and hope to launch their proposal in the next few weeks to add to their £21m contract for a school in Brandon, Suffolk.

There is also interest from a second Swedish company for a primary school.

Father-of-two Kenneth Dunstan from Kingston said he would prefer local providers with a vested interest in the community, but said it was good to have an open and competitive market.

He said: "It's a very sad affair that we have to have somebody from outside to rescue us, so to speak.

"On the other hand we know they are brilliant at doing things and experts coming in is not a problem.

"But I still have a niggling question about if they are really not for profit. What's in it for them?"

Meanwhile, parents of older children can choose from Kingston Educational Trust's six form of entry, co-educational, non-selective secondary school to be located in the North Kingston Centre and open by September 2015.

A second school, Kingston Church School Foundation, has released its prospectus for the King Edward the Martyr School, which also aims to meet the shortfall of secondary places in north Kingston and open by September 2015.

Proposals must win the support of parents willing to send their children to the school as a first choice to be approved by the Department for Education (DfE). The DfE could approve more than one proposal, but parents can only sign up and show their support to one.

Brother pays tribute

A man who lost his brother has paid tribute to his fun-loving sibling and called him "a character and a half".

Dean Roberts died with friends and family present at St George's Hospital in Tooting on Wednesday, October 10, at the age of 28, after a three-year battle with cancer.

He moved to Kingston as a youngster with his family and attended Tolworth Junior School and later Hollyfield School in Surbiton.

Mr Roberts enjoyed street art and was a keen graffiti artist who went by the name of Neast. He also enjoyed rollerblading.

His brother Aaron Perry said: "He had a way of making everyone laugh. We will never forget him.

"Everyone has so many funny stories about him. He had a way about him. He was a character and a half.

"He was a jack-of-all trades and a master of none. He did anything for a couple of quid.

"He liked to party, to drink champagne and he liked living the high life. He was a wannabe celebrity. If he had money in his pocket he would take everybody out for a drink. He liked to be around friends and family."

He had also been incredibly happy with his girlfriend of 11 months, Jodie Duncan, who he hoped to propose to in coming months.

Admirers of the star of an Alfred Hitchcock classic are one step closer to securing a blue plaque in her memory.

Fans were disappointed to hear that their application for an English Heritage plaque could take up to five years to go up at the north Kingston

But the group discovered Heritage Foundation plaques can be available in just four weeks, so have entered a fresh application with plans to unveil the blue plaque by June next year.

tighten the junction could be justified.

The council also stated the existing cycle lane in Portsmouth Road was as continuous as it could be and dismissed extending it.

Mr Fray said: "I think this shows a lack of understanding from the council.

"We don't understand why someone has to get hurt before it does something about it. It needs to do something when people feel vulnerable."

Mr Fray had also suggested sponsoring Kingston Junior Cycling Club or putting money into creating a new club elsewhere in the borough.

But the council said it had already spent £1,500 sponsoring the Junior Cycle Club Schools Cycle Challenge event last summer with money that came from a Transport for London allocation for the Olympic legacy.

The council did say there would be an increased number of bike racks in the town centre and the unnecessary bump outside the TK Maxx store would be lowered, as asked for by Mr Fray.

Considering legal action: Khadija Rahman and her father Mohammed

Deadlinepix KT71271

Treatment 'shocking'

by TOM BARNES

tbarnes@london.newsquest.co.uk

A woman is planning legal action over claims her mentally ill mother was given electric-shock therapy at Tolworth Hospital without permission.

Khadija Rahman said she was furious over care received by her relative during two stays at Lilacs ward in the past two years.

Her mother was first admitted in the summer of 2011, having had psychotic depression diagnosed.

During that time the New Malden resident would visit and bathe and feed her mother, as she said she often found her wearing dirty clothing and was malnourished.

During a second stay, Miss Rahman said the trust went ahead with electroshock therapy without consent from either the family or patient, and then ignored pleas to stop the treatment.

Requests to have her Muslim mother looked after only by female nurses were also ignored, she claimed, meaning she was unwilling to come out of her room, and had less time outside during breaks.

Miss Rahman has complained to health watchdog the Care Quality Commission (CQC) after concerns raised to the trust in 2011 fell on deaf ears, and now plans to launch a lawsuit against the trust.

She said: "It was just appalling, sub-human, not something you would expect from a first world country."

A spokesman for South West London and St George's Mental Health Trust, which runs Tolworth Hospital, declined to answer questions about Miss Rahman's mother's care.

In a letter in response to the latest complaint made by Miss Rahman, the hospital said it went ahead with electro-shock treatment without consulting the family because doctors had "significant concerns" over Mrs Rahman's mental health.

The CQC said it could not investigate individual cases.

Store helps pave the way for revamp

John Lewis Kingston has donated £15,000 to help rejuvenate a church at the heart and soul of Kingston.

The department store is the latest donor to the All Saints redevelopment scheme, which will secure its 1,000-year history by transforming it into a community, heritage and cultural hub.

The project includes plans for a new community centre, refurbishment and renovation of the church and changes to the grounds.

Jenny Tomley, managing director at John Lewis Kingston, said: "This will see the creation of new town centre meeting points, which will benefit the whole community."

"Additionally, the heritage feature is a fantastic opportunity to celebrate the unique part that Kingston has played in the history of England."

Work will be done in stages, but the drive to raise £1.7m of the required £8.7m has begun, with donations from an assortment of donors including Benthalls and the Mayor of London's Outer London Fund.

The Rev Jonathan Wilkes, rector at All Saints Church, said: "Businesses, residents and tourists will all benefit from what we are aiming to do and we greatly appreciate the way our town centre partners are supporting our work."

Walk-in clinic 'failed to meet expectation'

by NAZIA DEWJI

ndewji@london.newsquest.co.uk

The former chief executive of NHS Kingston has admitted a clinic with walk-in services in Hook has not performed as well as expected.

David Smith, now chief officer at Kingston Clinical Commissioning Group, spoke at the first patient forum in the borough.

He said the walk-in Gosbury Hill Clinic had been forced on the borough by the previous Government and had not been a success so far since it opened in August 2010.

Colin Dance, chairman of the Orchard Patient Participation Group, which is next door, said: "It is frustrating for the residents who told him all along it would not work. It has been a waste of money and a total disaster."

A Freedom of Information request revealed the clinic sees up to 800 people in a week on average, has 925 registered patients and has seen 14,013 walk-in patients.

A spokeswoman for NHS Kingston said: "The clinic only opened recently but uptake is increasing and we know people benefit from the additional services it offers. We will be reviewing performance to ensure we put in place the right services."

As the Kingston Guardian went to press it was awaiting internal reports into the effectiveness of the clinic after an August Freedom of Information request was delayed for a second time.

Forum attendees also used the first quarterly event as an opportunity to quiz health officials on the NHS shake-up, which will see primary care trusts phased out and Kingston Clinical Commissioning Group holding the budget for most healthcare services from April.

Disabled people 'will be hit hard' by cuts

by CLARE BUCHANAN

cbuchanan@london.newsquest.co.uk

Hundreds of disabled people will lose their freedom, independence and will to live unless action is taken against cuts, campaigners have warned.

Jane Young, from New Malden, is campaigning against Government cuts to disabled services, which she said will affect every disabled person in the borough if they come in next year.

She said: "I don't think there's a disabled person in Kingston who can confidently say they won't be affected, because there are so many things being cut.

"The truth is everything's not fine. It's just awful. It's desperate out there. In Kingston we are fairly sheltered from it, but we won't be next year."

Cuts include a 20 per cent reduction to disability living allowance and shift to a new benefit, called a personal independence payment that Miss Young said 500,000 people will not qualify for.

The campaigner, who is a wheelchair-user, said 280,000 fewer disabled people will qualify for the Motability scheme, herself possibly included.

She said: "There are people who are very scared, some who barely

'No cuts': Jane Young with campaigners at a protest in January

have enough to eat or who will lose their care and be completely housebound.

"There's an awful lot of fear, poverty, hardship and suicides."

The Government plans to stop the independent living fund, which supplements funding of independent living support for 19,000 of the most severely disabled people.

Miss Young said the move will limit people's independence and stop people fulfilling their potential, including Baroness Campbell of Surbiton who relies on the support to fulfil her role in the House of Lords.

Miss Young, who suffers from an arthritic ailment known as spondylosis, is urging people to sign a petition calling on the Government to assess the overall effect of the cuts.

She said: "The complexity and the different timings of all of them make it a complicated time and really scary for everyone.

"The Government needs to look at assessing how the cumulative impact all of the different changes will affect people, rather than each individual one."

A spokesman for the Department for Work and Pensions said: "We are protecting the budget spent on disabled people, but we do want to make sure we get more support to those people who need it.

"We also want the system to better help those people who want to work and with some extra help could do so. The new system will look at what you can do, not what you can't."

The petition has more than 50,000 signatures so far and will close on November 1.

It is available at epetitions.direct.gov.uk/petitions/20968.

Campaigner confident of byelection win

A disability campaigner said he can become an MP after bookmakers slashed the odds on him winning a byelection to 100/1.

Adam Lotun, from Tolworth, is standing in the Corby and East Northamptonshire byelection on November 15.

He said: "People are talking about a top three finish for me, but I am looking at first place. I am going to win."

He has been taken on by Democracy 2015, a campaign launched by co-founder of the Independent newspaper Andreas Whittam Smith "to rescue politics from party elites".

Mr Lotun is director of a disability workplace company, a spokesman for Disabled People Against Cuts, a former neighbourhood watch co-ordinator, safer neighbourhood ward panel chairman and member of Kingston community police partnership.

Councils ‘cannot afford to buy prison land for school premises’

by NAZIA DEWJI

ndewji@london.newsquest.co.uk

Hopes for a much-needed school in a prison on the border of Richmond and Kingston have been dashed by councillors who admitted neither borough has enough money to buy the land.

The Latchmere House site, which closed its open prison last year, is owned by the Ministry of Justice which plans to sell it on.

Concerned residents attended a public meeting to discuss the future of the site last Wednesday evening.

The possibility of a school was dismissed due to a lack of accessibility, but councillors admitted they would not be able to afford to bid for the land.

Nicola Smith, from Kingston Council, said: “There is no question about a need for a school, but the councils do not own this site therefore we can’t decide that it should be a school.

“The site will be worth millions of pounds and as councils we just do not have the ability to purchase this land. That’s the reality of the situation.”

Barred: Coun David Williams, inset, said Latchmere House will become housing

Deadlinepix KT59974

Richmond Councillor David Williams said: “We can say to the Ministry of Justice you can have the most expensive park here, but it isn’t going to happen.

“Something is going to be built here.

“The site will be housing. There will be quite a hard case to be made that it could be anything other than housing because the Ministry of Justice will take the highest bid.

“That is the hardest constraint we face.”

The site cuts through both Richmond and Kingston, which means both boroughs will be involved in its planning consultation process over the next few months as the bids come in.

To date the councils have been unable to secure Latchmere House as a listed building despite many residents calling for the site’s heritage and green spaces to be retained.

Morgan Reynolds, 81 and a grandfather-of-11, of Bainbridge Close, Kingston, said: “I think they have already made a decision because it has been advertised as housing.

“A school has not been considered and I very much doubt it will be.

“A school is quiet, does not open on weekends and has long holidays so the traffic is not as bad. I am disappointed.”

The sale could be agreed by Easter next year.

Eighteen months for new lights

Street lights in a park that have been broken for at least two years may take another year-and-a-half to fix, a councillor has admitted.

Councillor David Cunningham said at a Canbury and Riverside Association meeting it may take another 18 months to fix lights in Canbury Park Gardens, sparking concerns from residents over safety.

Claire Haywood, 25, said she walked a longer route home avoiding Canbury gardens as she feared being attacked.

She said: “Walking through the park at night in the pitch black is dangerous.

“Sooner or later someone will be attacked. Something must be done about the situation.”

A spokesman for Kingston Council said a fault in the wiring meant the whole system needed to be replaced, at an estimated cost of £100,000.

He said new lighting in the park had been included in a heritage lottery bid to pay for enhancement work at the gardens.

Bike park may mean fewer cars

Regarding your recent correspondence, I could not agree more with Candy Harding's comments about better cycling security in Kingston centre (Better cycling security in town centre is good idea, October 11).

If the council and the police know Kingston is a bicycle-theft hotspot, then surely it cannot be beyond the wit of man for it to come up with a solution.

It must be in both parties' interest, not to mention the cyclists', to encourage fewer cars and more bikes in the town centre.

I am sure many cyclists would be prepared to pay a reasonable fee for secure parking in Kingston.

Many London boroughs already offer this (Croydon for example offers lockable bike boxes, situated in car parks, for a one-off, returnable £5 deposit).

NICK LUNN

Why should private sector pay for council pensions?

Regarding the Your Kingston, Your Say census, if you tick any box in question seven you are agreeing to the council increasing your council tax – if you do not want to contribute to Kingston Council's staff salary and pensions then say so.

I have two pensions, one from Kingston Council (public sector) and one from the time spent in the private sector.

I have just received a letter recently from my Kingston Council pension saying it is increasing my pension again next year by 5.2 per cent.

Former Prime Minister

Gordon Brown put a stop to inflation-proof private pensions by taking £5bn from the funds every year since the mid-1990s.

So why should Kingston Council staff be subsidised by the private sector, which does not get increases?

Is there no prepaid envelope to put you off replying?

This survey should have been carried out by someone not connected to Kingston Council.

Do you trust your council?

Fire service under threat

One thing we all take for granted is when there is a fire, fire engines arrive in good time.

London response times from our fire service are something we should take pride in.

Last year London-wide figures showed on average the first fire engine got to an incident in five minutes and 22 seconds, with the second engine arriving, on average, in six minutes and 35 seconds.

Of course when a fire or serious incident occurs every second counts.

However, London's fire service is under threat. Over the next two years £65m will be cut from the overall budget of the London Fire Service.

Some back-office savings can be made, but no one seriously thinks savings can be made without getting rid of engines and closing stations.

It is Boris Johnson alone who has set this arbitrary target, sadly without first taking any expert advice. You simply cannot cut London's fire service to the extent he is proposing and maintain the current level of service we all rely on.

Only a minority against floating homes plan

I was disappointed to read your Tide turns on floating homes headline [about the floating homes plans at Surbiton Filter Beds] in your paper recently.

While this is a very emotive statement it really does not reflect the current situation.

Substantial amounts of work has taken place to ensure all the key issues have been properly considered so the planning authority may take an informed decision based on factual evidence.

All of this new information will be made publicly available through a Regulation 22 submission that will be issued to the local authority this week.

This site is not a blue lung, it is a derelict and decaying brown field site with historic industrial use and which fills up from time to time with rain water. Environmental integrity of the site will, however, be established as a result of our planning application, if successful.

After many months of public consultation and canvassing we are in no doubt the vast majority of people within the community either welcome our proposals or are indifferent towards them.

It is only a small, yet very effective, minority that are truly opposed.

It is regrettable that MP

Edward Davey has chosen to speak out against plans that could deliver so much for the community, before he has seen the further evidence about to be published.

In our view many residents are simply tired of the war of words and want to see something happen on the site after many years of neglect.

'Need urgent action' on diabetes checks

by CLARE BUCHANAN

cbuchanan@london.newsquest.co.uk

Kingston failed to meet targets for delivering a health check that includes diabetes, which, if left undiagnosed, could cause blindness.

According to Diabetes UK, during 2011-12, 9.7 per cent of those eligible in Kingston were offered the NHS health check, which tests people aged 40 to 74 for risk of type 2 diabetes, heart disease, stroke and kidney failure.

DIABETES UK CARE. CONNECT. CAMPAIGN.

Testing: Diabetes UK said the NHS had to start giving the checks a higher priority

Kingston was far from reaching the 18 per cent target and below the national average of 13.8 per cent.

Poor performance continued with just 2.9 per cent of people being checked between April and June 2012.

Diabetes UK said there were 2,800 people with undiagnosed diabetes in the borough.

A Diabetes UK spokesman said: "NHS and local authority leaders in the area need to start giving this programme a much higher priority than has previously been the case. Urgent action is needed."

Carol Barnshaw, chairwoman of Kingston Association for the Blind, said she had seen many people, some in their 20s, who had developed diabetes retinopathy after not having the condition diagnosed.

She said the condition was the leading cause of blindness in under-65s and was often picked up by opticians rather than doctors.

She said: "People who do not get these checks are losing youthful sight."

NHS Kingston said plans were in place to increase the number of health checks and a programme was due to start in the next two weeks to provide an additional 1,500 to 2,000 checks this year.

A statement said: "It is unfortunate performance is judged more on the number of offers made rather than number of delivered checks."

"Our practices provide a large number of checks with an uptake rate of 79 per cent."

KINGSMEADOW

STILL BUSTIN' blood vessels

Famed for odes to high strength lager and shaven-headed women, Bad Manners bring their Ska Pop sounds to Kingston for a night of 80s nostalgia.

The north Londoners, who became novelty favourites of the UK pop scene riding on the coat tails of two tone luminaries such as the Specials, Madness and the Selecter, will make a welcome return at Kingsmeadow on Sunday, October 28.

Fronted by imposing bald frontman Buster Bloodvessel, the group's latest incarnation are sure to be on top form having recently embarked on a world tour, taking in shows in the United States, France and Australia, as well as UK festival dates.

Despite his less than agile frame, and advancing years, Buster still moves and shakes like a man half his age, and weight, so expect the type of all-energy performance that earned the group a reputation as one of the country's finest live acts.

Keen not to disappoint fans, he can usually be relied upon to play at least one rendition of the old favourites such as Lip Up Fatty, Special Brew and Can Can, but also keep an ear out for tracks from the shamefully under-appreciated 1997 album, Heavy Petting.

Released as a money spinner on the back of a ska revival in the United States, the record features some bona fide genre classics including a fantastic version of Deep Purple's Black Night and the hilarious title track Heavy Petting.

Still producing music, the group are currently signed to German label Pork Pie records, where their latest offerings are available via porkpieska.com.

SPICY SUNDAY

If you spend your weekends mowing the lawn or browsing flatpack sofas in IKEA it may be time to spice up your Sundays with a curry and cabaret night.

Join host Ms Unruly Scrumptious and guests Earl Okin, Ophelia Frenchkiss and Miss Dolly-Blow for an evening of songs and burlesque, all washed down with your favourite korma.

Daredevils are invited to watch the exciting afternoon of jaw-dropping cabaret performances and spicy curries.

The three-hour show will include creepy comedy, upbeat songs, deadly dances and themed burlesques from a variety of horrifically delicious acts ahead of Hallow's Eve.

Get your house in order if you want to move on

How you can maximise your chances of success

It is not just first-time buyers who are finding it harder to get a step on the property ladder – high deposits and tough lending conditions are making it harder for second-time house hunters to move on up as well, says the National Association of Estate Agents.

The association has come up with a checklist for those wanting to move to a bigger property. To help them succeed. It says:

TAMASIN COATES

property@london.newsquest.co.uk

Realism pays

Setting a realistic price, based on current market conditions, gives your home the best chance of being sold within a reasonable time frame. Once a figure is agreed with your agent, this price will give you an idea of what you will have to spend on your next property.

If you haven't been in the property market for some time, be sure to talk to your bank to find out how much you can borrow to further guide your property search.

Check out the latest house prices in your area visit:

yourlocalguardian.co.uk/li

Be aware of house price micro-markets

Although there are broad national housing market trends, there is always a lot of local variation, which can help you find a bargain.

A good local NAEA agent can help you identify trends in certain areas and offer advice on how much you should expect to spend.

Factor in 'hidden' costs

Remember to consider the cost of moving, agent fees and the additional stamp duty before you start the process of looking for your next property.

Stamp duty is not usually factored in to the mortgage, so it is important for these costs to be taken into account before settling on your target price range.

Know where you are prepared to compromise

Agree a shortlist of 'must haves' and supplement this with 'desirables'.

This process should help bring out what is essential for your new home and can help guide the selection process.

Maximise the sale value of your home

At a cosmetic level, applying a fresh coat of paint to rooms and lounge space can really help to spruce up the property.

Clearing 'the approach' can also give a better initial impression and boost 'kerb appeal'.

Finally, emptying rooms and storage spaces of unnecessary clutter can help to create a better sense of space throughout any property.

Kingston motorhead Tom Onslow-Cole was the fastest in qualifying at the final BTCC meeting of the season at Brands Hatch.

The 25-year-old went on to take a third-place podium spot from his pole position in race one.

However, he fell behind finishing 15th and 10th in the subsequent races.

Onslow-Cole, pictured on the podium, in his BMW 320si and driving for eBay Motors, finished the season sixth overall. Gordon Shedden took the title ahead of Matt Neal.

Kingston celebrates its next generation of Olympic stars

Kingston's Olympic judo hero Karina Bryant was the guest of honour at a night of celebration for the young Olympic stars of tomorrow.

In a year when the borough of Kingston finished 18th out of 33 in the London Youth Games, the Royal Borough of Kingston upon Thames Sports Awards recognised not only the sporting achievements of the young athletes, but also that of the coaches and volunteers.

Bryant, a former Tolworth Girls' School pupil, won bronze at London 2012, and the 33-year-old told the award winners that she was living proof that they too could become Olympic medal winners.

Among the awards

by TIM ASHTON

tim.ashton@london.newsquest.co.uk

highlights were Ciaran Sibley winning the Neil Desai award for sports personality of the London Youth Games in cycling and kayak slalom, and Peter Roberts winning the Sport Kingston award for sports personality of the disabled Games.

The sports team of the year went to Surbiton Hockey Club U12s in the junior section and the Surrey Starlets Amethyst cheerleaders in the senior section.

The Sport Kingston Trophy went to the kayak slalom team and the Active Kingston team award was won by Peter Gould in judo.

The Eileen Gray Award went to karate coach Satinda Sehra of Khalsa Champions.

Bryant said: "It was our goal as Team GB to inspire a generation, and events like this show that we were successful in inspiring the next generation of athletes.

"To be asked to come to evenings like this is a real honour. It is a very proud moment for me to back here. To be idolised and looked up to is very special."

SPORTSbrief

FOOTBALL: Corinthian Casuals went down 3-0 at Sittingbourne in the Ryman League Division One South. The Casuals have to wait until Saturday to redress the balance when they host Eastbourne Town.

HOCKEY: Goals from Robert Schilling and James Tindall could do nothing to prevent Surbiton going down 7-2 at table toppers Beeston in the Men's Premier Division. Surbiton are in cup action on Sunday hosting Isca in the EHB Cup.

Ks triumph

Kingstonian manager Alan Dowson praised Simon Huckle after the midfielder's superb volley made amends for an earlier mistake, writes Taimour Lay.

His winner in the tight 2-1 win over neighbours Carlshalt Athletic put Ks second in the Ryman League Premier Division.

Dowson said: "Hucks made a mistake for their goal. But it was a good response. I've had him a long time and have a lot of time for him. He's playing well and that's why he's in the side."

Ks host Burnham of the Southern Division One Central next Sunday in the FA Trophy second qualifying round.

Winner: Josie Inverdale collects the SportsAid Award from Karina Bryant
